

SPEAKING, WORKSHOPS AND TRAININGS

Barry Goldstein has a unique combination of experience and training that helps him provide critical up-to-date information about domestic violence to a wide range of professionals. He has many years of experience working with protective mothers as their attorney in custody, divorce, protection and other related cases. He has also consulted with many other protective mothers and served as an expert witness. Mr. Goldstein also works regularly with batterers as an instructor and supervisor in a New York Model Batterer Program. As co-editor of a new book about domestic violence, child abuse and custody, he had the opportunity to work directly with leading experts in the fields of law, mental health, journalism and domestic violence. He often has the privilege of presenting with Dr. Maureen Hannah, a professor of psychology and one of the nation's leading experts in domestic violence and custody.

Barry has provided workshops as part of judicial trainings in Rockland County, New York and in Tennessee where the chief judge promised to incorporate the information Mr. Goldstein presented into the custody court system. Last year he presented three workshops for the Oklahoma Attorney General's Office. Barry Goldstein has been selected to present at all five Battered Mothers' Custody Conferences and three times for the NCADV. He also makes presentations at higher educational institutions such as Fairleigh Dickinson University and Bergen Community College
